STAYING AFLOAT

In October, BCS held a Staying Afloat fundraiser at the Tye Yacht Club to help educate our community about our mission: to provide a community where people can be responsible and accountable for meeting their basic needs, and to equip them with tools to overcome financial difficulty.

Growing up in a family of five children, we kids often felt the stress as our parents experienced a continuous struggle to feed, clothe and house their rowdy bunch. In fact, I only remember a few select times when constant worry wasn't present in the thread of life. As we grew, the tension increased. My parents were drowning – emotionally and financially – and eventually divorced, sending family fragments in all directions as my older brothers escaped the resulting conflicts. It was a revelation when Barry and I married to find that couples could actually communicate well with each other regarding the crucial decisions needed to keep a family afloat. Although quite broke at times, we were able to love each other well as we navigated unpredictable life. And because of a commitment we made before getting married, were able to stay out of debt.

At BCS we meet families like mine every day. People who are drowning, weighed down by the destructive force of debt as they fight to keep their heads above water. Many are on the edge in their relationships because of the stress. It's a privilege and joy to offer a proverbial life preserver through the four pillars of the Sustainable Families Program. As our families shop weekly, receiving food and household items, the anxiety begins to recede. Meeting with Dino Biaggi, our Financial Literacy Manager, they welcome good financial counsel, and gain education through his Re$tart classes. So often we hear that couples have been able to talk about money for the first time in their marriages! The confidence from having a plan in place and the resulting debt reduction affords these families freedom many have never experienced and gives them a legacy of wisdom and promise to pass on. If you don't live in a family like mine, you know someone who does; someone who would flourish in the environment of caring, learning and accountability. The staff at BCS is delighted to offer them the tools to buoy themselves up through these challenging times. It's been a good year for BCS. We've reached some big goals and set others that sometimes feel unreachable. We continue to seek out ways to serve better and are so very blessed and thankful for each one who walks with us.

Gratefully,

Suzanne Birch

From Food to Legacy

by Dino Biagg Financial Literacy Manager

It's not easy sitting across from someone, especially someone you just met a few minutes ago, to unpack your very personal, and perhaps unpleasant, financial situation. I might argue it's one of the most difficult things we can do, especially if our significant other is sitting three feet away.

Yet, this is the norm at BCS. I have the privilege to enter that sacred space with hundreds of families each year. As you can imagine, there are numerous layers to talking through our financial dynamics. Often the math works, but there's no agreement on financial priorities or next steps. This contributes to increasing pressure and stress within the home.

I ask families to enter into a dialogue about how to sort through the emotional, financial, historical and relational components that make up their financial decision-making. Many adults know what to do, but are still figuring out why they're not doing what they know they ought to do. Emotion and perspective play a powerful role in how we make decisions around money, and often it is about the "tyranny of the urgent."

Top achievements made by our participant families

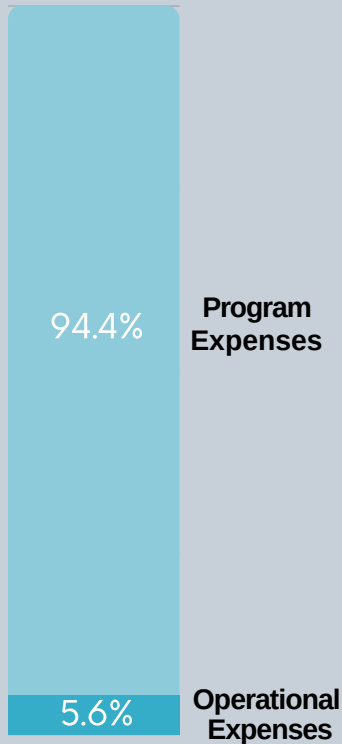

We'd love to think about buying a home in the future, helping with kids' college, and saving for a family vacation, but the medical bills, back utilities, house repairs, or car accidents begin to chew away at the ability to look beyond the next payment. I grew up on the California beaches and I really like this analogy, which pairs nicely with a recent event we held titled "Staying Afloat." When you're at the beach and look at the ocean, what always comes? Waves. Never-ending waves. When you're in the water, what typically do you focus on? The wave coming at you. Many of us find ourselves focusing on surviving that wave. If the focus stays on the next wave coming at you, you never have a chance to fully appreciate the ocean, and you never have a chance to choose and anticipate a special wave you want to really enjoy.

If you've ever watched a seasoned surfer, they're never focused on the first wave. They're looking at the second, third and fourth. Since waves come in sets, they're often keeping the next set in view and thinking through their timing, approach and positioning to be able to take the right wave for a great ride.

BCS loves helping families consider the bigger picture so they can fully enjoy their opportunities in the moment, and still help raise their gaze to the future so they can enjoy the ride.

Grateful for Our Families

Everything BCS does is geared to help our families reach their goals!

Since the class we've come together as a family in budgeting. We have a family meeting about needs, wants, and groceries...Since joining BIRCH I have someone to be more accountable to and my financial decisions have improved and I now have a family goal/vision for a secure financial future. Again, thank you. - Esther

Communication and Tracking Spending has gone hand in hand as a new change. Instead of budgeting just being "my job" as it's seemed in the past (he makes the money, I make it work kind of thing), my husband has now been included in the budgeting so we can have a full picture of our finances and how to balance spending. -Demiesa

BCS created a safety net for our family. I learned how to be the money manager by using the principles I learned at BCS. They provided the strength for me to do that, despite years of financial difficulty. - Jennifer

I understand more about money in these two days than I ever did in my 34 years of life. This helped my marriage too.

Thank you!
- Kimberly

I am so grateful for the help you give to our family each week. I just took inventory of our fridge and freezer and came up with FOURTEEN dinners I can make over the next 2 weeks. Incredible! This is so wonderful and amazing to me, that I just have to share with you all we can make at home because of all you guys do each week for us. I don't know that $70 has every stretched so far. -Annie

There is no way to calculate the ripple effects, but I can say that the impact has been long-lasting and I continue to hold the Birch Community in high regard. -Connie

Harry's: The End of an Era

Forty-one years after opening its doors, Harry's Fresh Foods is closing its Portland operations and moving to Everett, Washington. The Harry's name has been synonymous with generosity in the Pacific Northwest and it is no surprise why. For nearly two decades, Harry's has blessed thousands of BCS families with heartwarming, wholesome soups, meals, side-dishes, and desserts. In the last five years alone, BCS has been the fortunate recipient of over 2.6 million pounds of Harry's provisions. Harry's giving policy has only been surpassed by the care and encouragement its staff has bestowed on BCS drivers and volunteers over the years. Harry's will be deeply missed in Portland but their benevolence has left a lasting impression that will never fade. Thank you, Harry's, for filling the cupboards and hearts of so many.

Why Did the Chicken Cross the Road?

When Wayne Farms LLC, now one of the largest poultry producers in the U.S., first started in 1895, its founders knew quality poultry had to "come from a place of integrity and transparency". This belief, exemplified through Wayne Farms' passion for sustainability and community stewardship, continues to be evident today. For over a decade, Wayne Farms has generously provided Birch Community Services' families with wholesome, fresh chicken cuts, ready-to-cook, and ready-to-eat poultry products. In the last five years alone, BCS families have been blessed with nearly half a million pounds of donated chicken from Wayne Farms' warehouses in Alabama. The age-old question has finally been answered; the chicken crossed the road (in this case, the nation!) to serve working struggling families. This remarkable gift, in large part because of the generosity and compassion of Vice President of Prepared Foods and Sales,

Thomas R. Bell, and his dedicated team, has consistently brought stability, hope, and freedom for thousands of families in need. Thank you, Wayne Farms, for your immense generosity and dedication to serving your communities near and far.

Grateful for Our Donors and Volunteers

The Withrows: A Heart for Giving

At Birch, every time we receive a gift, we are filled with gratitude. We feel blessed from the encouragement and support from all our donors and volunteers, and this month we would like to give an extra thanks to Chad and Karen Withrow, the owners of Northwest Enforcement. When asked why they love Birch, Chad replied, "Birch empowers people with knowledge and education to bring true change -- long-lasting change. BCS will meet their need for today, but help them plan to meet their needs forever." This mission is so close to their hearts, the Withrows started their own nonprofit last year, called REACH, where they converted their old house into three apartments for people who need help finding affordable housing. Participants pay a small fee to live in the building, and must be consistently putting money into a savings account. We thank Chad and Karen for their consistent donations, but more importantly for their belief and support in our mission to care for people by meeting their basic needs, and to equip them with tools to overcome financial difficulty.

The Bolings: Volunteering Through the Generations

Everyone knows that to receive all the benefits of being a Birch family, you must give as well. All families are required to volunteer two hours a month, but we have many families who volunteer above and beyond their required hours. This year, we are especially thankful for the Boling family! We are lucky to have 17 members of the Boling family spanning three generations who are always around BCS. Charles and Michele started on the program nine years ago. It wasn't long before Michele encouraged her father, Wayne, to donate his experience as a truck driver picking up food, and his wife, Bev, followed suit in volunteering her time. Nine years later, we know the whole family will come to faithfully help us every week. The four children over 14 are volunteering stars, with Miriana and Shana putting in 12 hour days around their college courses, and the two oldest boys, Alexander and Matthew, serving about four hours a week. Thank you to the Boling family, and all the volunteers who help keep BCS running smoothly!

CULTURAL VALUES & PRINCIPLES

An organization's culture has a direct impact on the long-term value the organization and its employees create so we want to be deliberate about the culture. In application, this generally means:

- The core values establish expectations for all employees (at Birch this includes volunteers and participants).
- There is shared understanding among all employees of what the stated core principles mean and why they are important.
- All employees are accountable for putting them into practice.

VALUE CREATION

Everything we do should optimize the experience and impact the organization has on our participants. Through innovation, strive to create an atmosphere of efficiency and effectiveness, eliminating waste and bolstering productive decision-making, resulting in creating an environment where people feel valuable. This includes fully developing your capabilities to produce fulfillment and meaning in your work.

RELATIONSHIP-FOCUSED

Embrace and encourage a community of dignity and empathy. Foster an environment of purpose and meaning for all. People first. ("BCS is 10% about the program and 90% about the people." Barry Birch)

RESPECT

"Life is 10% what happens to you and 90% how you respond to it." Treat others with kindness, honesty, dignity, grace and sensitivity.

COMPLIANCE

Safety of our culture and people is paramount, requiring 100% compliance. Stop, think and ask before making decisions.

KNOWLEDGE/HUMILITY

"Wise men seek wise counsel." Seek and use best knowledge from all sources. Proactively share knowledge, equipping each other. Embrace challenge and the change process that drives creative destruction and fosters discovery. Develop measures that lead to more effective action. Encourage and practice teamwork. Be transparent and intellectually honest with others regarding our own strengths and weaknesses.

INTEGRITY

Being above reproach in everything we do, honoring the freedom BCS' mission creates for our participants. We are an open book. We courageously embody our principles, never compromising one for another

GRATITUDE

BCS is thankful for the opportunity to serve all our stakeholders. It is a privilege to work alongside donors, participants and volunteers. Donations are an immense blessing, never routine. Gratitude is a powerful catalyst for hope, directs our efforts and inspires others.
